Another push for referendum support unfolds

Making their pitch. City hall, Water Watch debate for a second straight night to woo support before voters choose a wastewater treatment plan

ROSS ROMANIUK
ross.romaniuk@metronews.ca

It was perhaps their last chance to make their cases on wastewater-plant management directly to prospective referendum voters. And Mayor Michael Fougere and Jim Holmes of Regina Water Watch were every bit as strong on their arguments before about 75 people on Thursday as they had been when speaking to hundreds a night earlier.

The second debate in two nights on the financing and operations model for Regina's planned sewage-treatment facility saw both opponents pitch their positions to members of the local Gyro Club at a south-end hotel.

Fougere told the audience of what he said would be savings to the city and to taxpayers if voters in the Sept. 25 referendum choose the public-private partnership (P3) approach to building and running the $224-million plant.

"We will save a lot of money doing it this way: about $20 million in terms of the operation and maintenance," the mayor said, stressing that up to $58.5 million in federal dollars are on the table as a contribution if the private-sector consortium option is chosen.

"Reducing pressure on taxes, stretching our tax dollars, trying to be more efficient — we think this is a great argument, a great proposal."

Holmes, however, insisted that while the city would own the plant under a P3 arrangement, the public would lose all control over it for the life of a proposed 30-year contract.

"The privatization of water, wastewater, is a very bad public policy," Holmes said, again — as he had in the previous debate at the University of Regina — accusing Fougere and city hall of concealing the P3 plan's real financial projections.

"The only people who are being kept in the dark here are the voters of Regina," Holmes warned, adding that "a private, unregulated monopoly" on sewage treatment is a "recipe for price-gouging" on those paying for it.

• CleanseMORE is a powerful colon cleansing product that works without the use of harsh, purgative type laxatives which can be addictive. It is effective for relieving occasional constipation.
• Instead of using harsh laxatives such as cascara sagrada or senna, CleanseMORE relies on gentle stimulating herbs that are non-habit forming. It also contains the mineral, Magnesium, which is something the body requires for many functions.
• CleanseMORE works by ensuring that the colon is properly hydrated, while at the same time stimulating 'peristalsis', the body's natural action of pushing contents out of the colon.

Family fights 'light' sentence

Chantelle Olive Dieter death. Grieving group gathers to protest charges against drunk driver in fatal crash

Family and friends of Chantelle Olive Dieter gathered in Victoria Park on Thursday to rally against what they say is a "light" sentence and insufficient charges against a drunk driver involved in the 20-year-old's death.

Speaking through a megaphone, Connie Dieter called on the provincial courts to overturn Mark Stinson's conviction so he could be tried with causing the crash that killed her niece.

"I would like to see him charged with drunk driving causing death ... the whole process, going through with those charges," Dieter said on behalf of the Chantelle Olive Dieter Family Support Committee.

The group has moved forward with its efforts, putting in applications to provincial ombudsman Kevin Fenwick and a complaint to the Saskatchewan Judicial Council. It's also sending letters to the provincial Crown prosecutors office.

"If the judge had followed the guidelines that the Ministry (of Justice) has brought out, he would have gotten the full extent of the law," Dieter, a legal consultant, said of Stinson.

"And Olive would not just be treated as an afterthought."

Stinson, 31, pleaded guilty on Sept. 9 to drunk driving and was fined $1,000 under a sentence in which he's also losing his driver's licence for a year.

He was found to have a blood-alcohol level of 0.12 per cent at the time of the accident, in which his truck and Chantelle Olive Dieter's car collided at the intersection of Broad Street and Wascana Drive on June 30 about 1 a.m.

Stinson, who was on his way home from a wedding, was charged with impaired driving and exceeding the legal blood-alcohol limit of 0.08. Dieter, however, is alleged to have run a stop sign.

Dieter, who has a 17-month-old son, died at the scene while her 21-year-old male passenger suffered serious injuries.

"Even if it was Olive's fault ... she paid very, very dearly for her mistake, and this man is walking around free," said Constance Stevenson, Dieter's grandmother.

Province seeks to bolster railway safety

On the heels of tragic incidents involving railways this summer, the provincial Ministry of Highways and Infrastructure is trying to improve safety on tracks that fall under its jurisdiction.

"We have an extensive safety program in place to ensure that the rail crossings and the railways themselves are maintained and operated safely," said ministry spokesman Doug Wakabayashi, noting that most rail lines in the country are federally regulated while the provinces are responsible for short-line tracks entirely contained within their boundaries.

On Wednesday, a Via Rail passenger train collided with a transit bus in Ottawa, killing six people and injuring more than 30.

Media reports on the tragedy have raised concerns about the visibility of crossing signals on the track where the crash occurred.

Wakabayashi said the Saskatchewan government provides free "reflective tape" for trains on the provincially regulated line, and mandates that the tape be "placed on the back of crossing signs." The tape creates a "strobe effect" that improves the abilities of passing trains to see the signs at night.

On the heels of a fiery derailment this summer in Lac-Mégantic, Que., and another in Calgary that nearly spilled a toxic substance into the Bow River, a growing tide of provincial and municipal leaders has demanded better communication with the federal Transportation Department and the railways.

Wakabayashi noted that most discussions about railways between the province and Ottawa focus on operational concerns, such as road work near crossings.

Ravi Seera, traffic manager for the City of Regina, noted that municipalities play a minimal role in handling crossing signals. The city is responsible only for flashing advance warning signs for rail crossings, such as those on Ring Road.

Regina performers 'play for change' with global event

Celebrating harmony. Daylong multicultural jam aims to unite people, raise money

ALYSSA MCDONALD
alyssa.mcdonald@metronews.ca

Live music will flow from a Regina café for a solid 12 hours on Saturday as more than 30 performers entertain on Playing for Change Day.

The event — part of a worldwide movement — at the Artful Dodger is aimed at raising money for local and international charities in the spirit of uniting people through music.

"It's a celebration of music through music — particularly music education," said Gary Robins, project co-ordinator for Playing for Change Saskatchewan.

More than 300 such events will be held on Saturday in 52 countries, all with the goal of positive social change.

"Music has a certain power to it. It's a universal language," said Robins, who also organized Regina's first Playing for Change last year.

"What we are trying to do is bring people together to celebrate music, along with all these other events that are happening on the same day in all these other communities."

The Saskatchewan event will run from 11 a.m. until after midnight at the Artful Dodger Cafe & Music Emporium, and for a couple of hours at Sawchyn Guitar in the afternoon. The volunteer musicians, who have been rounded into groups, will entertain with a different act taking the stage at the top of each hour.

"For a lot of (these) performers, it's a new collaboration so we are covering a lot of genres," Robins said, adding that a children's event, as well as circus performers and dancers, are part of the mix.

"It's more than just a jam session, but there will be a lot of cultural intermingling."

Admission is by donation. A silent auction is planned, with half the proceeds going to the Playing for Change Foundation's music schools in developing countries and the other half to local music nonprofit groups, including Creative Kids and children's choir Kids of Note.

Medical distress

Boy in remand at Sask. facility dies in hospital

A youth has died at a Saskatchewan hospital after being found in medical distress while held in custody.

Janice Wilby, spokeswoman for the Ministry of Corrections and Policing, says staff at Prince Albert Youth Residence saw the 16-year-old boy in medical distress on Wednesday and immediately took him to a hospital.

Wilby says the boy died in hospital at 1:15 p.m. Thursday.

She would not say what he had been charged with.

Wilby also wouldn't say what kind of medical distress the teen was experiencing and how staff found him.

Police, the coroner's office, the Ministry of Justice and Saskatchewan's Children's Advocate are investigating.

Taxpayers lobby

Group pushes city hall's side in wastewater referendum

A lobby organization for taxpayers is endorsing Regina's city hall in the upcoming municipal referendum on wastewater treatment.

Colin Craig, regional director for the Canadian Taxpayers Federation, said on Thursday in Regina that a "no" vote in the Sept. 25 referendum "can save yourself loads of money" on utility bills in the coming years.

The CTF said it will contact its supporters in the Queen City and urge them to vote in favour of the position, pushed by Mayor Michael Fougere, for a public-private partnership (P-3) in the construction and management of a planned treatment plant slated to cost more than $220 million.

Craig said the "yes" side in the vote, promoted by Regina Water Watch for a traditional "design, bid, build" model in which the city would take on the project alone, is not the best option for the public purse.

"The bottom line is the city is trying to save taxpayers money and we think that's a good thing," Craig said.

Taxpayers, he claimed, would save $276 annually for a few years by adopting the P-3 model.

Apology. Coca-Cola cancels promotion that produced 'retard' cap

Coca-Cola issued a written apology Thursday to the Alberta family that found a vitamin water cap bearing the words "you retard" as part of a promotion the company has now cancelled.

"This word should not have been included due to the English connotations and we have taken action," David Thomson, vice-president of still beverages for Coca-Cola Canada, wrote in a Sept. 19 letter to Doug Loates. "This includes cancelling the promotion, stopping production of bottles with these caps and destroying any remaining caps within our inventory."

The nationwide promotion saw a random English word followed by a random French word written on the inside of bottle caps. "Retard" had made the list of appropriate French words, as the context was intended to mean "late."

The French word "douche," meaning shower, was also the subject of a separate complaint.

Blake Loates found the words "you retard" stamped into the underside of a Vitaminwater bottle cap earlier this week. LUCY HAINES/FOR METRO

Loates, the father of Blake Loates, an Edmonton woman who brought the bottle cap to light earlier this week, said he was satisfied with the response from Coca-Cola and is happy with the action the company has taken to rectify the situation.

"I think they were caught off guard by this as it was a big oversight on their part," he said. "I am happy with the results and I have to believe this was an accident."

'Racially offensive'. Ottawa football team to drop Redskins name, logo

After more than a year of pressure from Ottawa-area Ojibway musician Ian Campeau, the Nepean Redskins football team is poised to drop its name and logo in favour of a new one.

"As a community sport organization, the Club aims to provide a healthy and positive environment for the youth in our programs, encourage sportsmanship at all levels of play and instill a sense of pride and support for our community both on and off the field," Steve Dean, president of the Nepean Redskins Football Club said in a press released issued Thursday.

According to the release, the transition is predicted to cost in excess of $100,000 and may take a number of years.

Campeau, also known as DJ NDN in Ottawa electronic-music group A Tribe Called Red, argued Redskins is "racially offensive" and needs to change. He launched a social-media campaign last year aimed at convincing the team's president to drop the name. It fizzled months later, but was reignited this summer.

Homeless man's honesty pays off

Big reward for a big heart. More than $91,000 has been donated to a fund for Glen James after he turned in a backpack filled with thousands of dollars

Glen James THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The overwhelming response to a fund set up for a Boston homeless man who turned in a backpack he found filled with more than $40,000 in cash and traveller's cheques is a "statement to everyone in America," says the Virginia man who started the drive. In just over two days, more than $91,000 has been donated to the fund for Glen James.

James flagged down a police officer Saturday after he found the backpack containing $2,400 in cash and almost $40,000 in traveller's cheques at the South Bay Mall in Boston. The man who lost it told workers at a nearby mall store and they called police, who later returned the backpack to him.

Boston police honoured James with a special citation Monday. After reading media accounts of James' honesty, a stranger, Ethan Whittington of Midlothian, Va., started a fund for James on the crowdfunding site gofundme.com. By early Thursday, $91,855 in donations had been made.

Whittington, a 27-year-old accounts manager for a marketing firm, said he decided to try to raise money for James after reading about his honesty. Now Whittington says he's overwhelmed by the generosity of strangers.

"The fact that he's in the situation he is, being homeless, it blew my mind that he would do this (turn in the backpack)," Whittington said Wednesday.

"It's caught on like wildfire ever since," he said. "It's brought me a lot of hope.... This isn't only about rewarding a great guy. I think it's a statement to everyone in America. If we come together and work toward one thing and work together, then we can make it happen."

Gen Yers aid Syrian refugees

Jordan. As their leaders dither over Syria, Western 20-somethings roll up their sleeves to help country's refugees

ELISABETH BRAW
Metro World News

Dina El-Kassaby, 22, from Canada, on those living in Zaatari: "There's a stereotype that refugees are lazy. But the refugees here are nurses, teachers, lawyers, and truck drivers. Almost everyone I talk to asks about work opportunities." ELISABETH BRAW/METRO WORLD NEWS

Every morning, Dina El-Kassaby heads to the Zaatari, Jordan refugee camp. The enormous site, located seven kilometres across the border from Syria in northern Jordan, requires an enormous staff. It has quickly grown from nothing to housing some 150,000 Syrian refugees in one year. And they have nowhere to go.

El-Kassaby, a 22-year-old from Vancouver, is one of the surprising number of young Westerners who've opted to work there.

"There's a stereotype that refugees are lazy," she notes. "That's false as far as Syrians are concerned. There are nurses, teachers, lawyers, and truck drivers here. Almost everyone I talk to asks about work opportunities. Women are well-educated, too."

Down Zaatari's main thoroughfare, refugees have set up myriads of unofficial shops, selling everything from shampoo to wedding dresses. They call the dusty patch the "Champs Elysees."

Perhaps it's this civilized aspect of the Syrian conflict that inspires young Westerners to help: After all, until a year ago the refugees lived middle-class lives not unlike ours. Or perhaps it's the recognition that we could find ourselves in the same situation. Or is it shame over the fact that 100,000 Syrians have been killed, more than 4.2 million people are displaced within Syria and two million have fled to other countries, while the West dithers over a course of action?

David Lampert, an 18-year-old from Vermont, asked his online Arabic teacher how to volunteer in Jordan, and travelled to the town of Mafraq near Jordan's border with Syria. "I just wanted to help the Syrian people," he explains as I meet him at the local church.

Mafraq, a town of 60,000, now houses some 20,000 Syrian refugees. The church, supported by Mercy Corps, an NGO, provides necessities like food and blankets to newly-arrived families, as well as a safe space for children and parents to rest.

Canadian Haitham Betts, 23, also helps out at the church, doing odd jobs and simply spending time with the new arrivals. "Helping people when they're in a crisis situation is so important to them on a personal level," he says.

Of the UN World Food Programme's staff of 80 in Jordan, 33 are aged 35 or younger — nine of them Westerners. Mercy Corps reports that 80 per cent of its volunteers are 35 and under.

Of course, this hugely complex and fast-moving refugee crisis isn't managed by 20-somethings. "It's important to remember that the people in charge are officials with long-time emergency experience," notes Marc Vergara, UNICEF's Head of Communications in Jordan.

And local Jordanian staff carry out a wide range of tasks, from delivering food to mounting tents. But the young Westerners are right here on the ground, providing a crucial service to thousands of desperate people.

"I want people at home to understand the horrific levels of violence going on in Syria, and how terribly difficult it is to pack up and leave," Aoife McConnell, a 27-year-old UN Refugee Agency worker from Ireland, tells me when I meet her in Mafraq.

"But it's really tough to get the message out," McConnell adds. "The reality in the world is, how can we ask people who're worried about their own economy to give money to Syrian refugees?

"But consider this: Every night when you go to bed, another 1,000 Syrians have made the heart-wrenching decision to leave and are crossing over the border to Jordan."

David Lampert, left, 18, from Vermont, and Haitham Betts, right, 23, from Canada, help Pastor Sahawneh Nour at the Mafraq church. ELISABETH BRAW/METRO WORLD NEWS

Bus-train crash victims. Cause of collision that killed six at Ottawa rail crossing still in question

JOE LOFARO
Metro in Ottawa

Ottawa police released the names and ages of all six victims in Wednesday's crash between an OC Transpo double decker bus and a VIA Rail train in Barrhaven.

Numerous agencies and people in the community have been moved to express condolences to the families of the victims, and some families communicated statements about their loss through the Ottawa Police.

Below are comments gathered from social media and statements released by families and others:

Connor Boyd's friend Kayla Bennett wrote on her Facebook page: "Connor Boyd you were such an amazing person. I have known you since elementary school. Everyone knows you by your laugh or how you knew everything about everything!! I can't believe you are gone!! ... you will be missed."

"The family of Kyle Nash are devastated by his tragic and premature death. He was deeply loved. They thank everyone for their support and ask for privacy to grieve at this time."

"We are very saddened by the loss of Karen (Krzyzewski). She was a gentle spirit who was caring and compassionate to others. She loved life to the fullest. Karen was the mother of two young adult children. She is survived by her parents and a brother and two sisters ..."

No family statements were released through police concerning the final two crash victims; Rob More, 35, and Michael Bleakney, 57. Bleakney's Google Plus and LinkedIn profiles listed him as a geotechnical engineer at Public Works and Government Services Canada.

Grieving wife

Terry Woodard, whose husband, David Woodard, 46, was driving the bus Wednesday, spoke with AM 640's John Oakley.

- "David was in good health. He didn't fall asleep at the wheel. He's always rested the night before he goes to work. I don't know what to say. Either he didn't see the lights or the barricade wasn't down just in time," she said.
- In a Facebook post she wrote: "Today I lost my HUSBAND the love of my LIFE my best friend ..."

Russia. Oil activists held at gunpoint

Two Canadian activists are among a group of 25 people who were being held at gunpoint aboard a Greenpeace ship, the environmental group said Thursday.

Arctic Campaign Co-ordinator Christy Ferguson said Paul Ruzycki of Port Colborne, Ont., and a man from Montreal whose name was not released were arrested when Russian Coast Guard officers boarded their vessel, which Greenpeace says was in international waters.

Ferguson said at least 15 members of the Coast Guard used helicopters and ropes to rappel on board the Arctic Sunrise, a Greenpeace ship carrying a crew bent on protesting offshore oil drilling in the Arctic.

The incident took place Thursday as the ship was circling an oil platform in the Pechora Sea, an arm of the Barents Sea.

Mudslide buries Mexican village

Acapulco. Tropical storm ravages nation, destroying 35,000 homes and killing at least 97 people

A mass of dirt, rock and mud swept down the hillside in the remote mountain village of La Pintada, burying half the hamlet and leaving 58 people missing on Monday afternoon, Mexico's Independence Day.

Nancy Gomez, 21, said she heard a strange sound and went to look out the doorway of her family's house, her one-year-old baby clutched in her arms. She saw the ground move, then felt a jolt from behind as her father tried to push her to safety.

When the rain-soaked hillside gave way, it swept up Gomez in a wave of dirt that covered her entirely, leaving only a small air pocket between her and her baby.

Eventually, relatives came from a nearby house and dug her out.

She never saw her father again.

The 58 missing from La Pintada were not yet included in the official national death toll of 97 caused by the storm.

Mumbai, India. Police charge 5 in gang rape of young photojournalist

Police in India's financial centre of Mumbai filed charges against four men and a juvenile in the gang rape of a photojournalist that fuelled further debate about women's safety after a fatal assault in New Delhi sparked mass protests.

The 22-year-old photojournalist was on assignment with a male colleague at an abandoned textile mill in Mumbai's Lower Parel area — where luxury malls and condominiums stand alongside sprawling slums — on Aug. 22 when they were approached by several men who offered to gain permission to shoot photos in the building. Once inside, the pair was attacked. The male colleague was beaten and tied up while the attackers took turns raping the woman.

The Mumbai charges come a little more than a week after a New Delhi court sentenced four men to death for the fatal gang rape of a 23-year-old medical student on a moving bus in the capital last December.

MasterChef Canada announces judges

Broadcast. Homegrown version of the Gordon Ramsay hit show will debut in winter 2014

Three high-profile chefs were literally bursting with excitement during their first day on the set as judges for the new TV show MasterChef Canada.

Restaurateurs Michael Bonacini, Claudio Aprile and Alvin Leung will put home chef contestants through their paces in the Canadian version of the Gordon Ramsay hit, expected to debut on CTV in the winter of 2014, the network announced Thursday.

"It was incredible. It was lightning in a bottle," Claudio Aprile, the owner and creative force behind the Orderfire Restaurant Group, which includes Toronto's Origin brand restaurants, said during a break on Monday. "The best part was finally just getting on camera, getting into wardrobe and really becoming part of this incredible experience."

CTV put out a call for auditions in June and thousands of home cooks vied to be on the show. It will be up to the trio of judges to put the contestants through individual and team-based cooking challenges.

Bonacini said the contestants have gotten this far "because they're damned good cooks, good home cooks, and part of our role is to whittle that down and then work with them by mentoring, our guidance, our commentary, our criticism and build them up to one of them becoming the first ever MasterChef Canada." Big deal

"The big difference here is just the enormous scale that this production is on.... It's a scale I don't think anyone has ever seen here in Canada, which really sets it apart."

Online privacy. New tool lets you opt out of some of those creepy web ads

Canadians who get spooked every time they see online advertisements that seem to be based on their browsing history now have a tool available to stop some of the snooping ads.

The Digital Advertising Alliance Of Canada has launched youradchoices.ca, which allows web users to opt out of so-called behavioural advertising.

Behavioural advertising is typically based on web browser "cookies" — small files that get dropped on your computer with information about browsing history and habits. Advertisers can read those cookies and serve up product pitches targeted to individual web surfers.

The opt-out tool at currently stops consumers from receiving behavioural ads from 115 ad agencies, ad networks and companies.

Behavioural ads paid for by those companies will soon be marked with a blue triangle-shaped icon, which will link to more information about the new opt-out system.

But unmarked behavioural ads may still be pushed to consumers by companies not affiliated with the voluntary program. THE CANADIAN PRESS

AMERICA'S GOT A FEW SOLUTIONS

THE METRO LIST

Mike Benhaim
metronews.ca

1 Cop-foolery. A North Vancouver RCMP officer was fined this week for an incident that occurred last February when he was clocked, while off-duty, driving at such high speeds that West Vancouver police were called in to assist. Const. Michael Milo Arbulic eventually stopped and revealed he was merely playing a prank on fellow police officers, reinforcing what some of us already know: Cops are hilarious!

2 Star gazing. A paper published in Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society revealed a star from which a magnetically driven jet is creating a fascinating planetary nebula. The most surprising thing about this is the existence of a publication called Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society.

3 Designer genes. Next month, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration will hold a two-day public meeting to discuss genetic modification of the human egg. The conversation will revolve around "oocyte modification" involving material from a second woman, enabling offspring to carry DNA from three parents. As usual, this probably started somewhere with one guy trying to convince two women to have sex with him at the same time.

4 Parental misguidance. A study released by Safe Kids Worldwide showed that one in four parents have driven with children improperly secured in their car seats. Another two out of four have just thought about it.

5 In-line gaming. Consumers lined up overnight for a copy of the long-awaited Grand Theft Auto V. Tensions mounted as gamers grew anxious over spending so many hours in queue, which would have otherwise been spent playing Grand Theft Auto IV.

6 Bust-a-cap-puccino. Starbucks is asking customers not to bring guns into its shops. Not an outright ban, but a friendly request that makes sense in a store where people wait in long lines to load up on overpriced, caffeinated beverages that require a glossary to order. "Give me my grande, non-fat, double-caf, extra-foamy mochalacachino now!"

7 Beavertails. Foodies are apparently using an exotic vanilla-like flavouring found among the anal secretions of beavers. This is huge news for people who would rather hunt down a nocturnal, semi-aquatic rodent and negotiate entry into its holiest of holies to achieve that almost-vanilla taste, than to just buy vanilla in a store.

8 This week in music. In 1983, Kiss was on MTV to promote the release of Lick It Up, where they appeared sans make-up for the first time. Thousands of women seeing the real Gene Simmons leapt to their feet shouting, "That's who I slept with?"

9 America got tricked. Kenichi, the winner of America's Got Talent, gets a chance to headline his own show in Las Vegas and a prize of $1 million ... over the next 40 years! That's right. For those who don't read the fine-print disclaimer, that's $25,000 a year, or a job washing restrooms at Denny's without a raise for the rest of your life. Thanks, AGT. They couldn't have done that without you.

Jewel-encrusted skeletons discovered

A relic hunter has lifted the lid on a macabre collection of 400-year-old jewel-encrusted skeletons unearthed in churches across Europe. Art historian Paul Koudounaris has hunted down and photographed dozens of gruesome skeletons in some of the world's most secretive religious establishments.

This decorated skeleton of the martyr Valerius, pictured, was discovered in the Roman Catacombs and transferred in the 18th century to the Church of Saint Peter and Paul in Weyarn, southeast Germany.

"Weyarn has only one jewelled full-skeleton relic, but when it is this good you really don't need any others," says Koudounaris. METRO

Photographer's viewpoint

"I was writing a book on charnel houses when I came across these skeletons. As I discovered more about them I had this feeling that it was my duty to tell their fascinating story."

Paul Koudounaris, Los Angeles-based art historian

They are just part of the community

Koudounaris underscores how the skeletons had more of a civil duty than a spiritual function.

"They were thought to be miraculous and really solidified people's bond with a town. This reaffirmed the prestige of the town," he said. METRO

Don't do it for the Vine. That's the message Obi Nwosu wants to get out after a failed attempt at jumping over a moving car (à la Kobe Bryant) left him the laughing stock of the Interwebs. While it's hard to pity someone who risks his ability to walk for the sake of a six-second laugh, you gotta give the guy some credit for creativity. But let's not single this fool out — there are plenty of other Vine users getting creative without getting crushed.

Pinot:
This stop-motion artist is as close as they come to a professional "viner." And if six seconds isn't enough, find more of his work at pinoditart.blogspot.ca.

Meagan Cignoli:
Fashion photographer by day, Cignoli knows her way around a camera. And it shows.

Yves Das:
The Belgian artist was making vids long before Vine was a thing, which is clear after one glance of his feed mostly featuring his mini motorcycle getting up to trouble.

Synopsis

Keller and Grace Dover (Hugh Jackman and Maria Bello), Franklin and Nancy Birch (Terrence Howard and Viola Davis) and their kids spend Thanksgiving together. After dinner the youngest members of the family, Anna Dover (Erin Gerasimovich) and Joy Birch (Kyla Drew Simmons) go for a walk and never return. The police, led by Detective Loki (Jake Gyllenhaal), arrest a suspect, Alex Jones (Paul Dano) who Keller is convinced is guilty. When Alex is released, Keller takes matters into his own hands. Kidnapping Jones, he tries to beat a confession out of him. When that doesn't work his methods escalate.

Hugh Jackman pulls out claws of a different kind for Prisoners. CONTRIBUTED

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

How far would you go?

Prisoners.
Hugh Jackman shines as a volatile vigilante in this film about fractured families searching for justice

Richard: Mark, Death Wish — the Charles Bronson revenge drama — painted its main character as a vigilante hero, someone who evened the score when the police couldn't. Prisoners isn't as cut and dried. It asks the question, how far would you go to get the information you need to protect your family? As played by Hugh Jackman, Keller Dover is a conflicted man. I think he knows what he's doing is wrong, but doesn't see a choice. Either way, it's going to get audiences talking about the ethics of vigilantism. What did you think?

Mark: There will be a lot of debate about the rougher scenes in this film. But it's a debate that has been in the news all through Jack Bauer's similar dilemma in 24 and the American waterboarding controversy. It probably goes back to Machiavelli and his "ends justifies the means" dictum. But no matter which side you are on this is a gripping thriller that didn't let me go for its full two and a half hour running time.

RC: It is good stuff, but it almost felt like two movies to me. The first hour-and-a-half is a good family drama about a man pushed to extremes after the disappearance of his daughter, while the last hour feels different. I don't want to give anything away, but it becomes more like an episode of Criminal Minds than the first part. I enjoyed both halves, but I preferred the complexity of the family drama.

MB: I guess the long first half gives it the depth so the second half feels more than an episode of Criminal Minds. It requires great acting, which it has, although seeing Hugh Jackman in the lead, I kept expecting him to burst into song in the first half hour. Did you like Paul Dano? Should he send Brad Dourif a cut of his paycheque?

RC: I thought the performances were uniformly strong. We're used to seeing Jackman differently — as a superhero or as a 19th century balladeer — but here he's really volatile and powerful. Dano takes a tough, thankless role and in the little screen time he isn't chained up or worse (no spoilers here!) keeps us wondering about the guilt or innocence of his character.

MB: There are a lot of plot twists in this movie and Dano's character is only one of them. This is the kind of movie you should see with an empty bladder because you won't want to miss any tricks.

Drama

The Hunt

Director. Thomas Vinterberg

Stars. Mads Mikkelsen

Mads Mikkelsen is excellent as a small-town teacher wrongly fingered as a pedophile by the rest of the community, but he's acting in a vacuum. The supporting characters in The Hunt are all so broadly drawn that Mikkelsen's subtle acting stands out all the more vividly. Intended as a parable about the dangers of groupthink, Thomas Vinterberg's film is by turns powerful and unforgivably manipulative; instead of an ambiguous movie about guilt and blame, we get a heavy-handed melodrama.

The Art of the Steal

Crunch and Nicky Calhoun (Kurt Russell and Matt Dillon) are brothers and art thieves who haven't worked together since Nicky snitched on Crunch and sent him to prison. Years later they team up to steal one of the world's rarest books, but will the job lead to more double-crossing? Or a taste of revenge? Jay Baruchel and Terence Stamp co-star in this twisty-turny movie that mixes laughs with intrigue, crime with revenge to present an original and offbeat heist flick.

RICHARD CROUSE

Drama

Battle of the Year

Director. Benson Lee

Stars. Josh Holloway, Chris Brown

In what is a fictional reimagining of his own documentary Planet B-Boy (which he conveniently references throughout), Benson Lee's Battle of the Year tells the story of an American breakdancing "dream team" who compete against odds for the world's title. With predictably formulaic plotting and characters as cardboard as a breakdancer's podium, Battle at least has some amazing dance and choreography. It's just too bad those sequences appear edited together by a speed-freak with a penchant for cutaways.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Kate Winslet. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Kate Winslet is going to stay Kate Winslet

Despite marrying Ned Rocknroll last year, Kate Winslet won't be taking his name, as she "was never going to change my name to Rocknroll," she tells the Telegraph.

And apparently it has nothing to do with how ridiculous her husband's legally changed name might sound.

Winslet reasons that she didn't change her name when married to Jim Threapleton or Sam Mendes, either.

"I quite like Kate Winslet. In fact I think it's very flashy," she says. "I'm proud of my name because I'm one of three girls and we have one boy in our family so essentially the only person who is going to carry the name along is my brother and he doesn't have any children at the moment."

Winslet, who is already mother to Mia Threapleton, 12, and Joe Mendes, 9, is currently pregnant with her first child with Rocknroll.

Jennifer Aniston

Breaking news: gossip rags made up another Aniston story

It's time once again for Jennifer Aniston's rep to poo-poo another pregnancy story, this time from Us Weekly.

"Jennifer is not pregnant and their story is just another fabrication," her publicist says.

It's unclear what prompted the speculation this time around, but Aniston has been trying to keep a sense of humour about it.

"It does feel like they've exhausted the speculation," she said in a television interview last month. "Why not just wait until we actually get to have the fun of announcing something?"

Diane Kruger and Joshua Jackson have been together for seven years, making them one of Hollywood's more successful couples. But their first date was so awful, he's lucky he ever got to see her again.

"He thinks he asked me out on a date, which is not true, because I did not agree to that. I agreed to have drinks with him," Kruger said during an appearance on Conan on Tuesday.

Through the power of an eager expression and a clean shirt, Jackson managed to turn drinks into dinner — where, the German beauty says, he talked about himself for an hour and a half, in a restaurant that made her ill.

"It was overgrown with beautiful flowers, to which I had a huge allergic reaction — like really, really bad. I was sneezing and coughing and my eyes were watery."

He took her home in a stinky car his dog had chewed up, and when he went in for the kiss she seriously considered slapping him. All of which answered a burning question I didn't know I had: How much does Joshua Jackson resemble Pacey in real life? Answer: So much!

Lindsay Lohan

Lohan on the straight and narrow

In her post-rehab bid to stay clean, Lindsay Lohan has apparently found the right kind of partner. The troubled starlet is reportedly dating former football player Matt Nordgren, according to Us Weekly.

"He's a great influence on her, and her friends and family love him," a source says.

James Franco

Franco clowns the clowns

James Franco doesn't have a problem with gay rumours about him, but he does apparently have a problem with a few gossip websites. So Franco decided to use his Instagram account to poke some fun at the subjects of his ire, posting photos of himself locking lips and holding hands with a mystery man, a shout-out to gossip site Gawker scrawled on it. "Just a Franco afternoon," he wrote.

He also posted photos of himself getting intimate in a car with a mystery woman, name-checking sites Perez Hilton and Just Jared in the process.

If I learned one thing about South Africa when I was touring its Cape vineyards a few years ago, it was that its population is gaga for grilling. They love it so much that the country's national holiday is called National Braai Day.

Braai is the Afrikaans word for a barbecue, and its unifying karma draws South Africans together every Sept. 24.

Sosaties is a South African twist on the Mediterranean kebab that typically skewers lamb, apricots and curry powder. Liquid partners don't come easy. Even if it's deployed lightly, the curry makes this dish a wine pairing challenge.

While an off-dry, white wine made with riesling or chenin blanc will hold up well when your plate throws some heat, sauvignon blanc-led white blends are a less conventional, though equally accommodating, choice.

The Beach House 2012 Sauvignon Blanc Semillon ($9.95 to $11.99) combines bright, citrusy flavours with a soft, tropical undercurrent that makes a great mate for shellfish and the spicy side of Sosaties' personality.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

S is for scrumptious South African Sosaties

This recipe, a South African take on kebabs, is a staple of the country's National Braai Day celebrations. COURTESY DISTELL GROUP LIMITED

Braai. The Afrikaans term for barbecue is a custom so prevalent in South Africa that it was given its own holiday. Celebrate on Sept 24.

Ingredients

- 50 ml olive or cooking oil
- 2 large onions, both sliced into broad rings
- One green pepper cut into approx. 2.5 cm squares
- 3 tbsp of smooth apricot jam
- 15 ml wine vinegar
- 1 tbsp brown sugar
- 2 crushed bay leaves
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed
- 1/2 tbsp salt
- 1/2 tsp of pepper
- 1 tsp turmeric
- 1 tbsp curry powder (mild korma to hot madras – the choice is yours)
- 500 g boned leg of lamb, cut into 2.5 cm cubes
- 125 g dried apricots

1. Heat the oil in a frying pan and sauté the onion rings and green pepper blocks until very lightly cooked, making sure the onion rings remain intact. Drain them on absorbent paper.

2. Combine the apricot jam, vinegar, sugar, bay leaves, garlic, salt, pepper, turmeric and curry powder in a ceramic or glass bowl and add the onion rings and green pepper.

3. Add the meat to the mixture and marinate for 24 hours in the fridge, stirring two or three times.

4. If the apricots are not soft, soak them in a little water until plump. You might also want to soak the skewers so that the exposed ends do not burn to charcoal during the cooking process.

5. When you are ready to cook, thread the cubes of meat, apricots, onion rings and peppers onto the skewers. Your barbecue's temperature should be 375 degrees or a medium heat. The recommended cooking time is 6 minutes per side with a half turn at three minutes.

6. Pour the marinade into a saucepan, bring to a boil and keep warm to serve with the sosaties.

Mussels' coconut milk bath

1. Heat your potjie (dutch oven) over the barbecue until hot.

2. Add oil, celery, onion, galangal, garlic and lemongrass. Season with salt and pepper. Sweat until onions are transparent. Add lime leaf. Add curry paste and mix with other ingredients.

3. Toss in mussels and white wine and cover potjie. Bring wine to a boil. Add coconut milk and simmer covered. Season with salt and pepper again, checking periodically to see when mussels open. When mussels open remove from heat.

4. Add Thai basil, mint and coriander. Serve in your potjie.

Good gourd! Autumn gets bottled up early

Pumpkin Ale. Fall doesn't officially start until Sunday, but these seasonal brews have been in some stores for a month.

Pumpkin ale is a favourite but is it too early to crack one open? MICHAEL FELBERBAUM/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's bad enough that back-to-school comes in June, and Halloween arrives in July. And of course we all know Christmas begins in September. But now even the craft beer industry is caving to seasonal creep.

This year, the beer drinker's harbinger of autumn — pumpkin ales — apparently couldn't hold off until the pumpkins actually ripened.

Summer doesn't officially end until Sunday, but some craft brewers couldn't even wait until then to roll out their pumpkin and other fall seasonal beers.

Many already have been in stores and on taps for a month. And not all beer drinkers are saying, "Cheers!"

"Everyone likes pumpkin beer, but you don't want it to come too soon. I definitely like to drink it in the appropriate season," says Nate Marsden, 23, of Boston, who nonetheless recently gave in to the temptation of his favourite seasonal brew, Pumking, an imperial pumpkin ale from Southern Tier Brewing Co.

He's got company. Beer connoisseurs who wanted to savour summer a bit longer have been airing their gripes on social media. Taking to Twitter with hashtags such as #HolidayFail and #SummersNotOver, people like Andrew Hickey let it be known they weren't impressed with the early start.

Forget being irritated about back-to-school ads, the 33-year-old tweeted — complete with a photo of the offending brew — back on Aug. 16. "Why is there pumpkin ale already on shelves?!?"

Brewers were quick to explain that they didn't have much choice. They said increased demand and the size of their breweries meant they needed to start making the beer earlier. And that means it gets to consumers earlier, too.

"If you think it's too early for Pumpkin Ale, don't go get some," Schlafly Beer in St. Louis posted on its website in August. "It will still be on shelves for the next couple months (hopefully) and you can pick some up down the road."

Dan Kopman, the brewery's co-founder, said that in a perfect world they'd have their summer offerings available through the end of summer, then start selling their fall beers soon after. "When something changes that has been very traditional, you're always going to get a comment," he says. "It's a great problem to have and is simply reflecting what's going on in the market."

god & government
an exploration of the role of 'religion' in contemporary statecraft

FACULTY of ARTS

by naomi goldenberg (university of ottawa)

Goldenberg's lecture will examine photographs taken at a recent exhibit at the Museum of Civilization in Ottawa entitled God(s): A User's Guide. She will discuss her view that the display demonstrates a deep anxiety about 'religion' along with a desire to pacify 'it'. She offers a theory that attempts to explain this fear, as well as the goal of governments who fund and endorse such public displays. In so doing, Goldenberg will draw on topics related to politics, international law, Jewish religious history, and discourse about world religions and gender.

Broncos bowl over Pats in season opener

WHL. Regina's hard work all for naught as Swift Current capitalizes on chances en route to blowout

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

For the first 40 minutes of Thursday night's game at the Brandt Centre, the Regina Pats were on even keel in almost every category with the Swift Current Broncos.

Just not on the scoreboard.

Unable to recover from a three-goal deficit after two periods, the Pats fell 7-2 to the visiting Broncos in the inaugural game of the 2013-14 Western Hockey League season.

Despite outplaying their southwestern Saskatchewan rivals for the first 40 minutes of play, Regina was undone by a trio of Swift Current power-play markers including Connor Sanvido's backbreaking tally in the dying stages of the second.

The Broncos would add another two early in the third to extinguish any improbable Pats comeback.

Coda Gordon and Brycen Martin chipped in a goal and an assist each for the Broncos, while Geordie Maguire supplied both Pats goals.

In a steady performance behind the pipes, Broncos netminder Landon Bow stopped 25 of 27 shots

Pats goalie Dawson MacAuley made 17 saves in the loss.

The teams face off against each other once again on Saturday, this time in Swift Current.

Oilers keep RNH in offensive fold

The Edmonton Oilers have taken another step in locking up their young core by signing Ryan Nugent-Hopkins to a seven-year contract.

Nugent-Hopkins got $42 million US, the same amount the Oilers gave Taylor Hall on his seven-year deal. The $6-million cap hit is also the same as Jordan Eberle's, making for uniformity among Edmonton's top young forwards. Nugent-Hopkins underwent surgery on his left shoulder April 23 to repair a torn labrum and is unsure if he can start the NHL season.

CFL. Lions say Simon can forget about friendship

BC Lions defensive back Ryan Phillips will always cherish his friendship with Geroy Simon. But not so Sunday.

The friendship will be put on hold when Phillips and the Lions visit Simon and his new club, the Saskatchewan Roughriders, in a key West Division matchup at Mosaic Stadium.

"I (played) with him for eight years and he's definitely been a great mentor, a great guy, a great teammate and a personal friend," said Phillips, a 30-year-old Seattle native. "Our families are connected and things like that.

"But, at the end of the day, once we get between those lines, Geroy's definitely the enemy. He's in the green and white, so he's definitely the opposition. So we've got to make sure we take him out and minimize him and make sure he makes no big plays — because I know he's looking forward to coming in and making a couple big plays against us."

B.C. (7-4) can move into a second-place tie with Saskatchewan (8-3), which has lost two straight. This will be the first meeting between the teams since Simon, who played 12 of his 15 CFL seasons with the Lions, was traded to Saskatchewan in January.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
It'd be smart to keep your opinions to yourself over the next 24 hours, but it's unlikely you will. Maybe it's for the best. Maybe it's time you lay down the law. But make sure you stick to the law too.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You're not allowed to fail. At least that's what you tell yourself. The planets say different — they say you're human like everyone else.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Mercury, your ruler, is at odds with Pluto, planet of excess, which means you will most likely open your mouth and put both feet in it — again. Just be careful what you say does not cost you some serious money.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You want to be totally honest but you fear that if you speak your mind it will be taken as a declaration of war by certain people. What of it? That's their problem, not yours. Speak up.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
There is something that needs to be cut out of your life and if you don't get rid of it now, you may be stuck with it forever. Pluto power will help you to be ruthless today.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may be in the minority as far as certain viewpoints are concerned but according to the planets you are on the side of the angels, so stop worrying about what others might think and do what you know to be right.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Libra is a cardinal sign, which among other things means you enjoy arguing about controversial issues. Today though, you must make sure that all your facts are just that.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You'll shock people with what you say, and with the forthright way in which you say it. Pluto, your ruler, is moving in your favour again, so chances are you'll get away with it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Why are you so scared to make contact with new people? Whatever the reason, get over it because you will meet some interesting characters today — the kind who can open doors and swell your bank balance.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You have every right to express your opinions but don't forget others have a right to disagree with you. Some of the feedback you get today may not be favourable but it will make you think and that's good.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Try not to get bogged down in details. Once you look closely at one thing, you will start looking closely at everything, and there's just no need. You're a "big picture" person, so leave the small stuff to others.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Don't waste time explaining to others why you decided on a certain course of action. Either they don't understand or they think it will inconvenience them. SALLY BROMPTON
